

Valentine & Company's Nigh Bank iron ore washing plant, Centre County, ca. 1890s. Courtesy of the Centre County Historical Society.

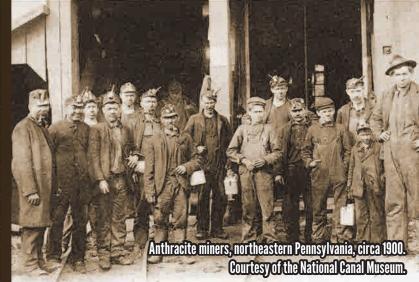

PENNSYLVANIA ARCHAEOLOGY MONTH OCTOBER 2015 Rediscovering Our Industrial Heritage

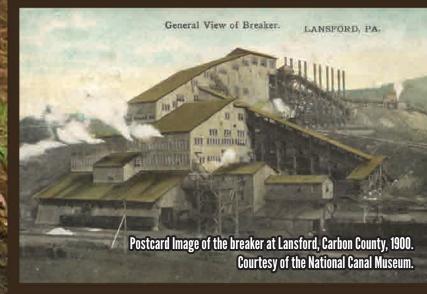

Jeff Duncan (left) and Tom Hartley recording foundations of the ca. 1887-1898 Valentine & Company Iron Ore Washing Plant (36CE526) in Centre County. Abraham Valentine's invention of the iron ore/clay separator known as the log washer rejuvenated the local and national iron industry. Heberling Associates, Inc., for the Centre County Industrial Development Corporation.

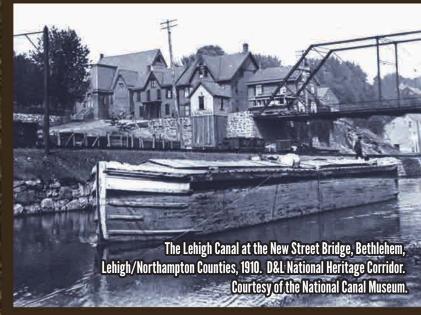

POSTER SPONSORS: The Society for Pennsylvania Archaeology • The Pennsylvania Archaeological Council • Skelly and Loy, Inc. • Heberling Associates, Inc. Cultural Heritage Research Services, Inc. • Mercyhurst Archaeological Institute • Navarro and Wright Consulting Engineers, Inc. • A.D. Marble & Company

Central photograph and poster design by Gary Coppock, Skelly and Loy, Inc. • Graphics by Christopher Yohn, Heberling Associates, Inc.

 Nitkery fror Works, Bellefonte, Par

 Descard image of Nittany Iron Works, Bellefonte, Centre County, Circa 1905. Curtesy of the Centre County Historical Society.